

My home is so much more to me than a house. It is where I know I am always welcomed and loved. All of my childhood memories are stored in my house, because my parents had it built when I was born. Family is one of the most important components that make up my home. Our outdoors is another asset that is tremendously important to my family. To me my house has the complete qualities to be the perfect American Dream Home.

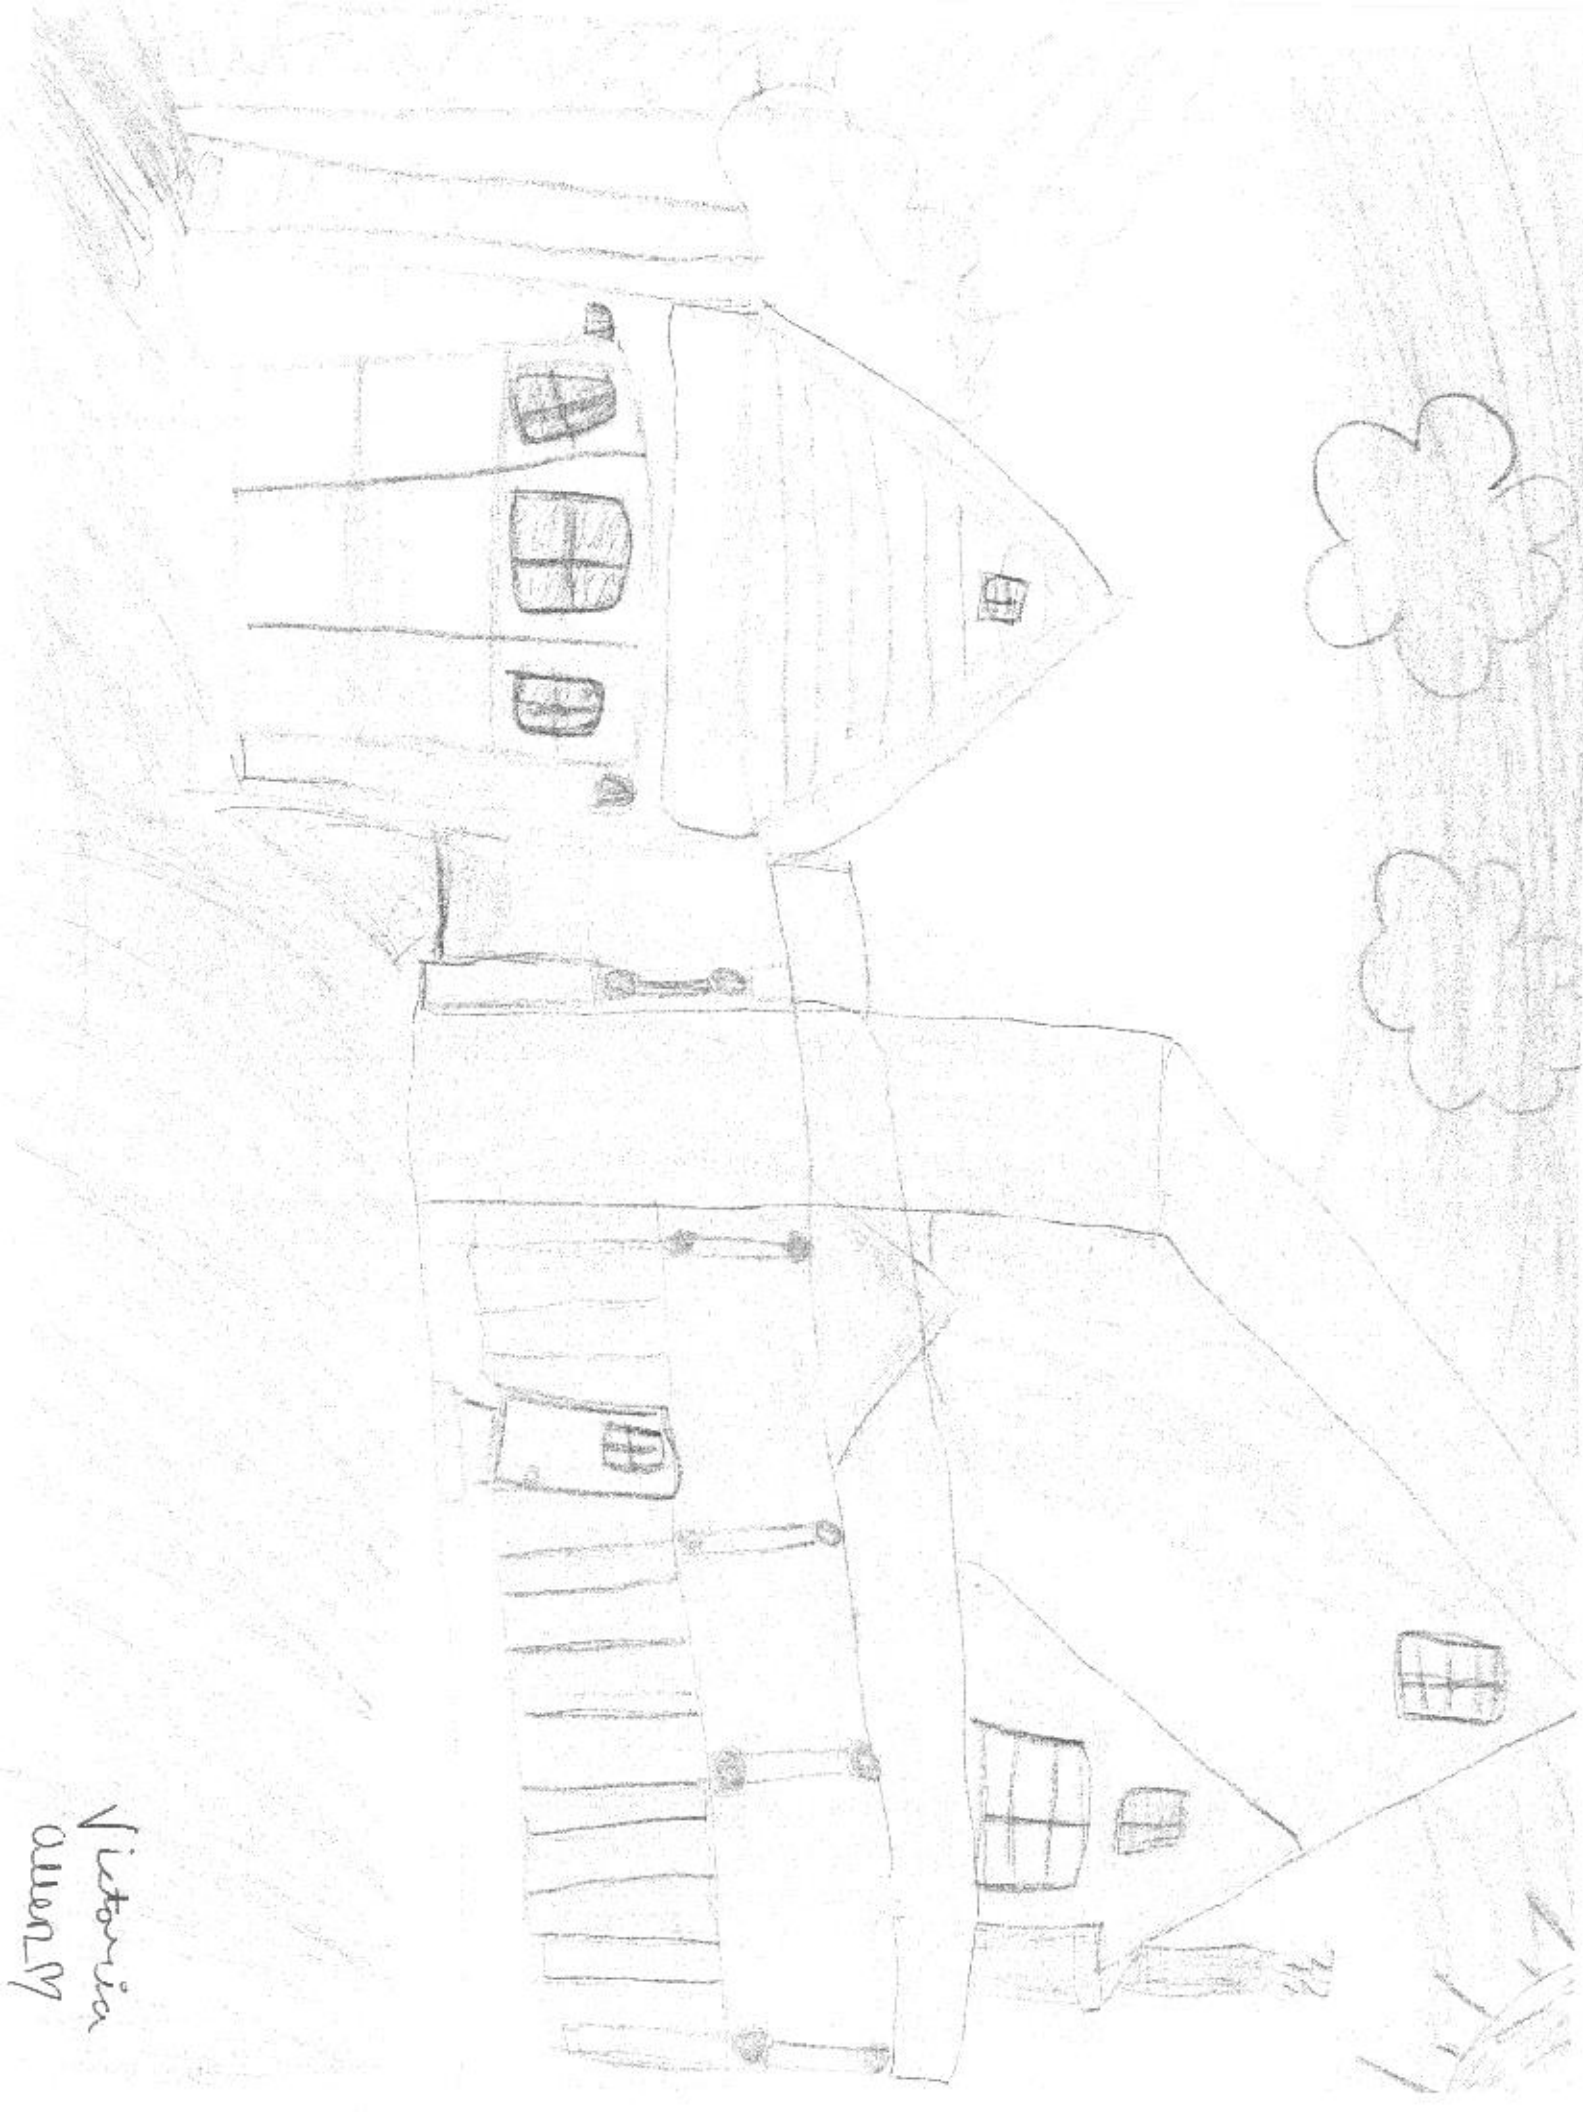

My home has many valuable features. It is an elegant Victorian styled farmhouse with heavenly blue siding. Also, it has a pool in the backyard which all my family, friends, and me really enjoy. The house has three bedrooms, my parents, my brothers, and mine. Our house is warm, cozy, and welcoming. I love all the comforting values of my home.

One great asset to my home is the surrounding outdoors. The woods are gorgeous and vast. Our woods, which hold many memories like when I first learned to ride my bike, even though it started out on the pavement, mainly have dazzling pine trees. I could stay outside for hours just playing. I love the comfort of our outdoors; it is like nothing else in this world!

A house is not a home until it is completed with the ones you love, your family. Family is what makes a house have warmth, comfort, and a sense of love. My mom, my dad, and I all live in our house, and my brother used to live with us until he left for college about three years ago. Most of my extended family lives within an hour of me. In fact my dad's parents live straight up an old logging road from my home, and it is really nice that way. Besides God, family is the most important asset in my life.

My home hosts many family traditions. After a funeral our extended family always comes to our house to eat, because we want to celebrate our family member going to live with Jesus. On Sundays my mom and I even have this tradition where we ride our four wheelers after church and lunch. Also in the hot summers, we have a tradition on each Saturday that we have our family come over to hang out, swim, and simply talk about our week. I know all this sounds somewhat boring, but in truth, it is not. Family traditions are really close to my heart.

My home is extremely important to me. The most important part of my home is my loving family and friends. I have lived in my house my entire life. All the assets to my home are extremely important to me. Usually I would prefer to be at my home than I would any other place in the world! This home is not the typical house; it is an American Dream Home!
